++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Showers becoming confined to coasts tonight. Chilly.

This Evening and Tonight:
Some late sunshine between occasional showers, these largely dying out from late evening but a few will persist across the West Coast and Isles. Mostly dry and clear elsewhere overnight, combining with light inland winds to bring frost to some. Minimum temperature -1 deg C (30 deg F).

Friday:
Cold but generally dry start with bright and sunny spells, especially along the West Coast. Scattered showers developing inland from late morning, but outbreaks lighter than Thursday. Maximum temperature 13 deg C (55 deg F).

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Fair start to Saturday, then strengthening winds and periods of rain soon spreading from southwest, reaching all by afternoon. Thereafter showers or longer periods of rain, heavy at times.
